ART STORY

A playful expression of clay, pottery and sculpture inspired by a global spirit of color, patterns and fashion. Representing the story and history of Buckhead.

Buckhead's contemporary society dates to 1838 when Henry Irby bought a hundred acres of land, and shortly built a general store and a tavern. Irby's tavern became the stopping place for travelers in the sparsely populated area. The community began to grow around it with families and businesses.

During the 19th century, the pottery industry began to develop in Buckhead in part to the fine quality of clay in the area. Georgia is famed for its bountiful clay resources and has a rich history of pottery with archaeologists dating pottery remnants found in the region to as early as 3000 BC.

Georgia's potters consider themselves humble artisans. They were in business to provide fellow farmers with sturdy vessels for simple everyday use. Buckhead has since come a long way - from a small general store on the corner of West Paces Ferry and Roswell Road surrounded by wilderness, to an affluent commercial and residential district with extreme wealth.

As local demand for food-related wares declined, tourists and crafts enthusiasts became the main customers for our beloved potters. There are potters still in business and others who recently revived the family's pottery tradition after skipping generations.

“I help create happiness by infusing moments of joy in everyday lives.” -Claire Desjardins

Claire Desjardins (b. 1965, Montreal) is an award-winning Canadian artist living and working in Gore, Quebec. Working primarily in painting, her formally driven work focuses on gesture and colour, emphasizing energetic, animated brush strokes and bold palettes. Her work is both highly abstract and highly personal, a dynamic expression of sentiments or reactions of which she is consciously unaware.

Artwork can be viewed in each guest room elevator.

“I believe in the magic of the hand. I believe in integrity because, as a wonderful southern gentleman once said to me, the truth will stand when the world is on fire.”

-Kimo Minton

Kimo Minton (Born 1950 in Lawrence, Kansas. Lives and works in New Mexico). Recently, my partner Christine showed a 3 year-old girl named Bay one of my abstract woodcuts and asked, “Do you know what it is?” Without hesitation Bay answered, “Music”.

I think that will do for me. I try to work in a way similar to Jazz improvisation, letting my inspiration have free reign to use the “chops” I have developed from my long involvement with carving and painting.

Just as some music does not have words to carry its meaning, some pictures do not need subjects or overt symbolism.

I have always been a carver. I have loved being involved with form and color. I believe in individual style and invention over academic theory, trendiness, and conformity.

The idea behind the mural is a play on words between Atlanta and the lost city of Atlantis. Our city and state have been involved in significant economic growth and development, favoring the relocation of an important part of cinematographic production, so the interest in exploring not only the city but our state has increased. From the top of one of the skyscrapers, you can hardly notice the presence of houses due to the sea of trees that shelters our city, that is why it was ideal, that our trees appear as a landmark in the mural, and which motivate the visitor to go out and explore unknown places. Atlanta emerges over this turtle, unafraid to show its splendor.

Painting can be viewed in Three Arches.
